Instructors:

Carole Marithe Trévisé, Course Head

The main objective of this course is to examine what it means to communicate in a foreign language while helping students strengthen their linguistic skills and gain transcultural and translingual competence. Students will reflect on differences in meaning through the study of diverse cultural modules, including stereotypes; slang; advertisements; Impressionist art; Occupied France; current events; and French and Francophone literary texts and films.

Prerequisites and Restrictions: FRE 102 or FRE 103, or special permission.

Other Information: All work and instruction in FRE 107 will be done in French. Not open to First Year Undergraduates in Fall only.
