Intermediate French
FRE 105

Instructors: Raphael J. Piguet, Course Head

The main objective of this course is to develop your listening, speaking and writing skills, while allowing you to explore contemporary French-speaking societies. It offers a thorough review of French grammar and a wide range of communicative activities chosen to improve proficiency and give practice of newly acquired linguistic material. The course will build your confidence in French while giving you a foundation for the understanding of French-speaking cultures and exposing you to their rich literary and artistic productions. A wide range of authentic material will be offered, including films.

All classes are conducted in French.

Prerequisites and Restrictions: Appropriate score on the Princeton French Language Placement Test. FRE 105 is only offered in the fall.
